A Great Barbecue by the Harlem River and General Merrymaking Elsewhere-Some People Whose Faces Were Seen in the Throngs and Whose Names West Into a

Never before since Brommer's Union Park was opened had such a vast concourse of people assembled within its precincts as that which swarmed there last night. Thousands were on hand, elbowing one another good naturedly, crushing and perspiring.

The occasion was the festival and barbecue arranged under the auspices of the New York Eagle, and it was in every way a gigantic

The big ox, slaughtered in the morning, was duly reasted and it did not take long for the crowd to finish it up. Those who came two hours after it was roasted, inquiring for the ox, were shown its skeleton reposing gracefully in the centre of the grounds. Pretty girls were numerously on hand, and listened to silvery-tongued praise of Cleveland and Thurman whenever the band ceased playing. Dancing and speechmaking were the order of the experience.

"And I am glad you are dressed so becomingly. He is to be here!"
"Who, uncle?"
"Your future husband. I telegraphed to him this morning. Mr. Owenson, the sen of my old friend Owenson, who owns the Crimson Star Line of steamers. Rich as Crossus—handsome as Apollo. You'll fall in love with him at first sight—I know you will, and."

And then a regular lover's take followed; but presently Hope rose again.

"Rafus," said she, "you must come with me to the ballroom and let me introduce you to Uncle Hopkins."

"Just as you please," said Rufus."

And little Hope, all smi'es and dimples, led her lover into the brilliant confusion of the ballroom. and "_____ uncle," said Hope, who had grown very pale, "I shall not go to the ball to-night."
"Not go!"
"No, uncle,"
"But I insist upon it."

"So am I:"

And Uncle Hopkins took up his newspaper and prepared to make himself comfortable.

MONMOUTH PARK RACES.

Programme and Starters for the Seventh Unv of the Meeting.

THEY ARE FEATURES AT A NOVEL SIXTH This is the seventh day of the racing at Monmouth Park. The programme announced below is an excellent one, which, with good weather and a good track, will surely result in good racing. The fixtures are the Lassie Stakes, for two-year-old filles, and the Midsummer Handicap, for all ages. Women and How It Has Already Begun Extures are the Lassic Stakes, for two-year-old clines, and the Midsummer Handicap, for all ages.

The latter is at a nile, with Eurus the top weight at 125 pounds, and as the other starters include some fast inders. Mr. Cassatt's "rogue" will have to run well down in the "forties" to win. For the Lastic States Lake Margaret Angana and Files.

Such courage and such an object ought to appeal to women with comfortable incomes. It is a legitimate and wholesome endeavor on the part of their own sex towards mutual helpfulness. Substantial assistance has been already rendered by several wealthy leddes. This is generally tendered in a way which the Women's New York Club and Co-operative Exchange likes.

Mrs. Pike is devoting herself to the work in the most self-sacrificing way. She even scrabs the floor of the resaurant herself, in order to save the money that it would cost if she hired some one. "A woman would ask $1 to do it. As long as I can do it there is no reason why I shouldn't save even that small sum."

when off on his vacation from what he is in the city. He says in the city he makes it a rule only to speak to people on the street who are intimate friends and residents of the First Ward. He gives as a reason for this that if he was to speak to every one he knew his neck would be worn out from nedding, as he knows so many people, or from nodding, as he knows so many people, or rather so many people know him. But at the litanch he talks to every one. Hundreds of people every day seek introductions to him, and the majority are of the fair sex. They are principally people who do not live in New York, but who have read of him in the newspapers. He is a great favorite with the tolers, and in their presence there is nothing of the "stern Judge" about him. A great many ladies wonder why he is a bachelot, lie says he never loved but one woman since he attained inanhood, and she is an old aunt to whom he feels that he owes everything. Whenever he nees anything in the newspapers he marks it and sends the paper to his aunt.
